

Disclosure to Our Patients

Few medical practices in the U.S. have the expertise to perform clinical research trials. These trials take extraordinary time, skill and manpower. But without such trials there would be no new medications to treat diseases that cause so much human suffering. Our office is pleased to participate in clinical trials. You should know that these studies are strictly regulated by various agencies including those of the federal government.

Many health care providers, doctors, nurse practitioners, physician assistants and doctors in training (residents) find the treatment of diabetes and other endocrine problems to be confusing. For this reason, both Drs. Burtch and Weiss have been called on for our expertise to serve on various pharmaceutical speaker bureaus to educate health care providers. In this capacity, we help others understand disease and new options for treatment. We have also at times consulted for pharmaceutical companies.

We would like you to know that we receive compensation for our time and effort in the above activities. You should also feel confident that we offer every individual the best care we can, consistent with our mission statement.
